Conductor of Car Robbed of $37 and a Gold Watch

Pistols Pointed and Robbery is Committed in a Hurry---Suspected of Working "Lemon Game."

Columbus, Oct. 16.—As they were seated in the car at 10:55 last night, taking a short rest after changing the trolley about at the end of the Neil avenue car line at Eleventh avenue, Conductor W. H. Jester and Motorman Falen were held up at the muzzle of revolvers by two young men, and the conductor was robbed of a watch and $37.

Their car was No. 525. The two street car men were alone in the car. While they waited for the time to start on their return trip to the city, two strangers entered and seated themselves on the opposite side of the aisle. Something outside attracted the attention of the conductor and motorman, and when they again looked inside they found themselves gazing into a pair of leveled revolvers.

After the conductor was robbed, the hold-up men left the car, disappearing across the state university grounds. The street car men started back and when they reached a telephone notified the police.

They described the men as having worn black suits, without vests. One wore a soft hat and the other a derby. Both were smooth shaven and dark complexioned. They were about the same height, 5 feet 6 or 8 inches, and about the same weight, about 160 pounds. The man with the soft hat went through the pockets of the conductor.

The description of the hold-up men corresponds with that of two men who worked what is known in police parliance as the "lemon game" on Jos. Reid, aged 24, of Rushville, earlier in the evening, making him $25 poorer.

Reid was standing in front of the Chittenden hotel when two strangers invited him into the hotel bar to have a drink. Reid accepted the invi[tation]. A game of pool was then pro[posed] while they were playing, one [of the] men borrowed $25 from Reid to [play] the game. Reid loaned the [money]. The two men got into an ar[gument] and the man with the money [left]. Reid went to call a po[liceman] and when he returned the [men] was also missing.

Ablaze and Forest Fires are Gaining Headway

MANY LIVES IN DANGER

Believed that Train Load of Refugees Were Burned Alive

City of Alpena Burning and Cheboygan Threatened---Four Michigan Towns, With 2,000 Inhabitants, Destroyed.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 16.—Alpena dispatches say that Millersburg, a town of 850 population, has been completely destroyed by fire and the whereabouts of the inhabitants are unknown. Two relief trains from Alpena were forced to turn back because of the flames. The whole of northeastern Michigan is burning in spots and grave fears are felt for several thousand people. All hope for the people of Metz have been given up here. Railroad officials in Detroit have taken hold of the situation and are endeavoring to devise means for getting relief into the burning sections.

Word has reached here hat the town of Metz has been entirely wiped out by forest fires and that there is a strong possibility that a train load of refugees, numbering nearly 200 from the town, have been entrapped by the fire and burned alive. After fires had almost encircled the town yesterday, and all attempts at saving it had failed, the people boarded a Detroit and Mackinac train to reach Millersburg, 20 miles away. Word was received at Millersburg that the train ran off the track three miles out of town and further attempts at communication have not been successful.

Fires are now raging in four counties and millions of dollars worth of property is being destroyed. Forest fires have reached Alpena, a city of 20,000, and are now being fought inside the city by the entire population.

Cheboygan on the Straits of Mackinac, with 15,000 inhabitants, is seriously threatened. Meager reports from the burned district tell of the destruction of four small towns with 2,000 population.

DELMA KROUSE

Little Girl Who Was Badly Burned is Fast Recovering and Will Soon be Well.

Dr. D. M. Smith, who is attending little Delma Krouse, the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Krouse of Columbus, who was seriously burned Wednesday evening near the home of her uncle, B. & O. Engineer Bert Foley, Tuscarawas and Penney avenue, East Newark, states that the child is now on the way to recovery from her injuries. Although she was slightly delirious for a time as a result of the shock and fright, she is now assuming a more natural state and does not appear to suffer so much from the frightful burning.

The accident happened in the yard of a neighbor of the Foley family, Mrs. Markham. A bonfire had been started in the yard and a number of the children of the neighborhood, including the Krouse child, were playing about it. One of the children threw a bundle of papers on the fire and as they suddenly took ablaze the child's dress was caught. She sustained severe and painful burns about the hips and lower extremities but it is now thought she did not inhale any of the

MRS. LOGAN AND HER SON-IN-LAW, WHO WAS ARRESTED.

Washington, Oct. 16.—The arrest of Colonel William F. Tucker, an army paymaster and son-in-law of Mrs. John A. Logan, widow of the civil war general, caused a sensation in army circles. The charge against Colonel Tucker is wife desertion.

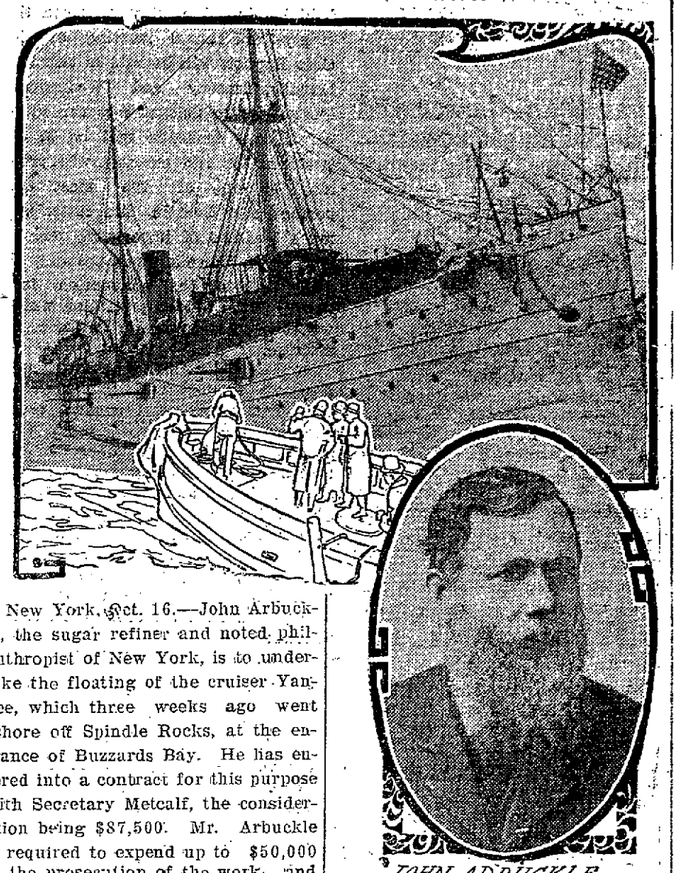
Mrs. Logan sanctions the arrest. In a statement given out at Washington she scored army morals and declared she wanted the world to know the facts concerning the domestic difference of Colonel Tucker and her daughter.

JOHN ARBUCKLE AND STRANDED CRUISER HE WILL TRY TO SAVE



JOHN ARBUCKLE

New York, Oct. 16.—John Arbuckle, the sugar refiner and noted philanthropist of New York, is to undertake the floating of the cruiser Yankee, which three weeks ago went ashore off Spindle Rocks, at the entrance of Buzzards Bay. He has entered into a contract for this purpose with Secretary Metcalf, the consideration being $87,500. Mr. Arbuckle is required to expend up to $50,000 in the prosecution of the work, and if then his efforts are unsuccessful and the attempt to float the ship has to be abandoned, the government will pay him $25,000. Mr. Arbuckle does not hope to make a profit out of the transaction, but is willing to risk his money with the hope of saving the ship. Compressed air will be used in the undertaking.

MERTES WRIGHT HAS RECOVERED

Victim of Mysterious Malady Again Well and Strong and Able to Work.

Mertes Wright, the young man whose deep sleep lasting for weeks at a time, and who was in a stupor almost continuously for six months, thereby puzzling the doctors, is now well and strong again and weighs 180 pounds. His case was a peculiar one and many physicians came from out of town to see him and to study his mysterious malady.

He seemed to have absolutely no control over his great, impelling desire to sleep, and though at times he would be conscious long enough to talk for a short time with his family, yet the terrible languor could not be denied. Dr. W. S. Turner was called in the case and for weeks he studied every peculiar phase of the unknown disease that Mr. Wright probably contracted while a soldier in the Spanish-American war.

Medical science finally triumphed and Mr. Wright is rapidly regaining his lost strength. The Wrights own a farm near Newark and the victim of the unknown illness is now able to work in the fields and is none the worse for the disease that almost took his life.

NEW COMPANY

ORGANIZED AT GRANVILLE, AND WILL DRILL FOR GAS AND OIL.

Rig Will be Erected and Spudding Will Start Within the Next Few Days.

The Columbia Oil and Gas company, composed of Newark and Granville people was organized in Granville with a capital stock of $10,000, all of which has been subscribed. The company has about 600 acres of land in the gas and oil belt of Perry county, and it is proposed to commence the work of development at once. Five directors were chosen and the organization was completed by the election of the following officers: President, Henry S. Fleek; vice president, William C. Miller; secretary and treasurer, John J. Carroll; Thomas Merriam Kier and Fenwick Ewing.

As will be seen the officers of the new company are all well known Newark business men. They have thoroughly investigated the territory in which their holdings are located, and everything indicates that they will meet with big success. They have already made a location on the U. S. Garey farm, in Reading township, Perry county, between Junction City and Somerset. The company has secured the services of J. J. Klise, one of the best known contractors and gas men in Ohio and it is his intention to get the rig material on the ground a once and start his men to work.

INCOME

Of Howard Gould Shrinks Over $200,000

BUSINESS DEPRESSION

Given as Reason and Also Claims Loss of $300,000 in Past Year

Multimillionaire Pleads Hard Times Against Wife's Suit for Alimony and Says She Was Extravagant.

New York, Oct. 16.—That Howard Gould's income was formerly $600,000 a year; but since the business depression of last year it has been reduced to $400,000, and that he has lost $300,000 this year, was stated by his counsel in an argument before Justice Bischoff.

The figures were given in opposing an application by Mrs. Katherine Clemmons Gould, who is fighting Mr. Gould for divorce, for an increase in her alimony from $25,000 a year to $120,000. To support her application, Mrs. Gould asserted that her husband's income was $600,000.

Delancey Nicoll, counsel for Mr. ..., says it is not so now. Mr. Nicoll also asserted that Mrs. Gould's career for many years had been one of unbridled extravagance and that last year she received from her husband $224,000.

Counsel for Mr. Gould declared that in 1906 Mr. Gould told his wife he would separate from her unless she abandoned her habits, but that Mrs. Gould declied to do so.

Clarence J. Shearn, counsel for Mrs. Gould, said Mr. Gould had tried to "starve his wife out" of Castle Gould, and had filled the house with guests, who watched her every movement, compelling her to move to a hotel.

Mr. Nicoll retorted that in seven years, from 1899 to 1906, Mr. Gould gave his wife $766,000 and that Mrs. Gould had saved $200,000 of it.

Decision on the increase of alimony was reserved.

HARRISON, THE REP. CANDIDATE, DOESN'T FAVOR GOOD ROA...

Wooster, O., Oct. 16.—John Harrison, Republican candidate for congress from this district, and at present county commissioner in Wayne county, voted against good roads, both times the proposition came up before the commissioners. Some time ago, a year or so, the farmers living north of town, took up the matter of making a mile of macadamized road, with the help of the state. The road is one of the most traveled roads out of Wooster. Harrison voted against it.

About a month ago the commissioners heeded the call of the citizens of Sugarcreek township, and authorized the building of a mile of brick paved road east of Dahon, in the eastern limit of Wayne county. John Harrison was not present when proposition was voted on favorably by other commissioners. Later when the contract came up for approval, Harrison voted against the contract, explaining that as he had not been present when the proposition was approved, he wished to show his disapproval for the new road by voting against the contract.

TWENTY-THREE

Were Killed in a Lisbon Riot Today During the Municipal Election Primaries.

Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 16—Twenty-three persons were killed or mortally wounded and 40 persons seriously injured today in a riot at Azambuja between monarchists and republicans during the municipal election primaries. Republicans lead the attack, following the monarchists into a church where a pitched battle ensued which was finally ended by troops.

Don't wash and scrub, bend and rub over a hot wash tub; sift a little GOLD DUST in the water, loosen the dirt, and save rubbing

Soap is not a bit of cleansing good until it is mixed with water and made into suds. And then it still needs the rub-rub-rub of human muscle.

GOLD DUST works in an entirely different way—instantly and totally dissolves in hot or cold, hard or soft water—and, without any aid from you, starts to cleanse.

GOLD DUST is more than soap—better and more economical. It is a powder of magic power—but rightly directed power, that leaves the wash white, sweet, wholesome.

Use your brains, not your muscle!

Throw away your soap, get GOLD DUST, and simply use it according to the directions on the package.

CHORAL SOCIETY

Grand Oratorio, "Messiah," Will Be Given at Auditorium on Thursday Evening, Nov. 19.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 19, in the Auditorium, the grand oratorio, "Messiah," will be given. The Newark Choral society, with 60 trained voices and big soloists, will appear. The society has been working on the "Messiah" since the May festival and finer singing is assured than was heard in the May festival. The soloists alone will be well worth the small admission charged. Marion Green, basso-cantante singer before sing the bass role. The McDonald sisters, of Columbus, will sing the soprano and contralto roles. Prof. Flora, of Newark, will sing the tenor role.

Marion Green is considered the greatest basso-cantante singer before the American public today. The McDonald sisters are well known to Newark people as first class oratorio singers.

The "Messiah" is the greatest piece of music ever given to the world. Its performance was never given in this city. Such an undertaking should be heartily supported by Newark citizens. The society feels that it will be. The Fall festival of song will be more of an undertaking than was the singing in May, and the cost will be double. The tickets are now selling and it will pay all lovers of good music not to miss the greatest musicale ever given in Newark.

CONVENTION WILL MEET IN NEWARK

IMPORTANT STATE MEETING OF OHIO BAPTISTS HERE THREE DAYS NEXT WEEK.

A Thousand Delegates Will be in Attendance—New Organization May be Effected.

An important convention will be held in Newark next week when the eighty-third annual meeting of the Ohio Baptists will be held in this city Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Messengers or delegates to the number of one thousand will be in attendance for the meeting will probably be one of the most important ever held in the state, and much business of importance will be transacted. An effort will probably be made to bring the convention into the Northern Ohio organization which would mean a revolution in the organization.

Monday afternoon the delegates will meet at the Baptist church in Granville, and escorts will conduct them through the college buildings and around the college grounds. A lecture will be given in Science Hall and at Recital Hall and those in attendance will be entertained with music. In the evening in Newark at the church Prof. C. R. Henderson, D. # AMUSEMENTS

Without question the best bill that has ever been offered at the Orphium theatre was that which opened the second half of the week last night, and Newark theatre-goers who enjoy real vaudeville will not regret the price of admission paid to see the present list of attractions. Of course the headliners of the bill are Adair and the four Henney Sisters in a musical act—singing and dancing—that is at once artistic and entertaining. The claim that it is "a bit of musical comedy" is an apt expression of the praise the act deserves. Three more weeks on the Sun & Murray circuit and Adair and the Henney Sisters will start a long tour on the Orpheum circuit. This fact alone classes the act.

Nick Hufford and Chain are immense in their black face comedy bit, both being old and experienced minstrels of Al Field's Donnelly & Hatfield show. Mr. Chain's imitation of an old colored preacher is exceptionally amusing, and he has a good voice for good comedy songs.

Brent Hayes, the banjoist, can only be appreciated by being heard. Mr. Hayes rightfully holds several medals, one of which represents the championship of England in banjo manipulating. His act has been abroad with marked success. The feature of the turn is the playing of the standard overtures with his own accompaniment on the instrument.

Spaulding & Dupree introduce an acrobatic act that is a novelty throughout. The ideas are new and not only entertaining but are instructive as well.

Friday night, as an extra attraction to add to the bill, Manager Moore presents "Dude" Headington in comedy cartooning. The act has received much favorable press comment wherever seen.

PAN HANDLE PETE.

Of the "Panhandle Pete" show which was heralded so loudly for an appearance here Thursday matinee and night, it suffices to say that it was absolutely rank. It is imposition on the public to allow such a company to take the people's money. There were just six people in the cast and they were worse than the rankest amateurs. The show was not even an attempt at a musical comedy as advertised, but was, rather, a rotten burlesque on a silly comedy drama. The "musical numbers" and chorus names were all "phoney"—and so was the show. The Auditorium management called the Advocate on the 'phone after witnessing the matinee and asked hat this paper expose the deception, but the Thursday afternoon edition was on the press and the announcement came just too late. In Coshocton the company was not permitted to show, and would not have been allowed to bump the Newark public had the management here been notified. As it was, Manager Morse displayed a notice at the theatre saying that the melo-dramatic version, not the musical, was to be seen at the evening performance. B. B. H.

THE PRESS AGENT SAYS:

The Boston Belles promise a wide awake, tuneful and good looking chorus, some intersting situations, lively comedy, some tuneful music, and a generally high class entertainment, at the Auditorium theater Saturday, matinee and night. "Zenda," the physical wonder, will appear with the show here in some of his marvelous feats of strength and muscular exhibitions.

Kathryn Osterman, in her new comedy, "The Night of the Play," will be seen here next Thursday evening. This is claimed to be Miss Osterman's biggest success and will doubtless be greeted by a big sale of seats. The sale opens Saturday.

PRAISE FOR "THE DEVIL."

"The Devil" company, which will appear here Monday night, was seen in Coshocton Wednesday evening and was a great success there. The Coshocton papers are lavish in their praise of the piece, both from the standpoints of plot construction and cast. The Age says, in part:

The Henry W. Savage production of Franz Mohlnar's sensational play, "The Devil," was presented to a Coshocton audience at the Sixth street last night for the first time. It is a masterpiece, superbly staged, and wonderfully acted, was magnificent. An actor of consummate skill and evidence of stage experience, he gave a wonderful portrayal; one could almost feel the evil permeating the atmosphere at his very appearance. The support was good throughout. Mr. Dekum as the impetuous young artist, Karl; Miss Lyon, as Olga; Miss Sherwood, as Elsa—they and all the others were excellent."

SOCIETY WOMEN.

Some Spend Hundreds of Dollars a Year on Their Hair.

Leaders of society in New York know the social value of attractive hair, and according to a metropolitan newspaper every society woman spends a great deal of money to keep her hair beautiful and resplendent.

These women employ highly paid hair dressers and specialists, and so long as they have the money to gratify their desire for beautiful hair, none should complain.

But what about the thousands upon thousands of women just as intelligent, just as refined, and just as lovable as any society women, who have not the means for expert hair dressers and specialists?

What are they to do?

Are they not entitled to beautiful, lustrous and luxuriant hair?

Most assuredly they are, and thousands of them give thanks daily to the great scientist and dermatologist who put within their reach, at a small price, the marvelous and quick acting hair tonic known all over America as Parisian Sage.

T. J. Evans will sell you a large bottle of Parisian Sage for 50 cents. It will make any woman's hair grow thicker, more beautiful, and lustrous in a few weeks.

It cures dandruff, kills the microbes, and stops falling hair. T. J. Evans to refund your money if it does not do as represented.

If your doctor says take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, then take it. If he has anything better, then take that.

If you are all run down, easily tired, thin, pale, nervous, go to your doctor. Stop guessing, stop experimenting, go direct to your doctor. Ask his opinion of Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla. No alcohol, no stimulation. A blood purifier, a nerve tonic, a strong alterative, an aid to digestion. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Secured Husband's Release.

Mrs. Frank Vogelmeier, who had her husband and Mrs. Lizzie Jones of Mansfield arrested yesterday on a charge of adultery, appeared before Mayor Atherton this morning and wanted to secure her husband's release from the county jail. Vogelmeier and the other woman were sent to jail by the mayor, they being unable to furnish the necessary $200 bond for their appearance in Common Pleas court. Later Mrs. Vogelmeier secured an attorney and secured the release of her husband on a writ of habeas corpus. The case will probably be dropped.

"Old Man Grump" Here.

"Old Man Grump," a clever creation of Shafer, the cartoonist of the Cincinnati Enquirer, whose work has been enjoyed all summer by local baseball fans, assumed a new role today, that was just intended for Newark alone. The Enquirer Thursday, showed the "old man" walking home from Detroit, having lost all his money on the Tigers, and taking advantage of the fact, a number of fans in Henry's cafe, wrote Mr. Shafer a card asking if "Grump" couldn't stop over in Newark. In reply Mr. Henry received a cartoon that he has had framed. It shows "Old Man Grump" sitting at his table, pipe in hand, a big glass of "suds" in the other, and out of his mouth comes the words, "I'm so darn glad to get home, boys, I'll have to have one on my Newark friends." The courtesy of the cartoonist is appreciated by all the fans that had a hand in sending the message to Mr. Shafer.

Men's League Meeting.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Norcross, the new superintendent of the Zanesville District of the Ohio Conference, will address the Men's League of the First Methodist church this evening at 8 o'clock. Special music by the K. of P. orchestra will be an attraction of the evening, as well as a fellowship lunch. All members are invited.

Interesting Banquet.

An enjoyable banquet was held in the Y. M. C. A. hall last night forty people being present. The occasion was the meeting of the college committee of the Ohio State Y. M. C. A. A series of interesting talks were given by prominent men intrested in the work. The addresses were all short, but covered the work being done by the association among the colleges, there being 42 of them.

WEDDINGS

KEYS-JOHNSON.

On Wednesday evening Rev. Joseph A. Bennett united in marriage Miss Ota Johnson and Mr. Stephen H. Keys, at the home of Mrs. Wilson in North Fourth street.

After the ceremony an informal reception was given at the Newark Sanitarium, where Mrs. Keys was formerly employed. A pretty feature in connection with the event was that a sister of the bride, Miss Jennie Johnson, graduated as a nurse and received her diploma that evening.

Mr and Mrs. Keys left for Washington, Pa., where they are guests of friends, and from there will go to Indiana, Pa., where they will reside in the future.

Congressman Ashbrook's Record.

He has been the Soldiers' Friend.

He is a Democrat, but had more special bills passed at the last session of Congress than any Republican member from Ohio.

He has helped 2163 soldiers, soldiers' widows and dependent children to receive either an original pension, increase or back bounty.

His speech on pensions on February 17th attracted national attention and is pronounced one of the best ever made in Congress. Soldiers who read it in thirty-two different states sent their congratulations to him.

He had more than four times as many special bills passed than the average of all members.

He has given prompt and efficient attention to all correspondence and has not neglected the most trival request.

He was made a member of the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures and the Committee on Militia.

He early introduced a bill to restore the motto, "In God We Trust" to our coins and had much to do with its passage.

He introduced and has pending a bill providing for an appropriation to erect suitable monuments for all presidents of the United States.

He was appointed a member of the Assay Commission by President Roosevelt and was made chairman of that committee.

He has distributed over thirty thousand books and government publications in the 17th district during the past year—a record never equalled.

He has shirked no duty and employed his full time in the discharge of his official duties.

He has proven that he is not only safe and sensible but that he is a tireless hustler.

He secured an appropriation for the purchase of a site for a postoffice at Wooster.

He made a gallant fight for the Newark postoffice and won out, although obstructionists desperately opposed him for political purposes.

He has been a friend of Labor and the poor man.

He is not antagonistic to the just interests of any one.

He has been endorsed by the State and National Letter Carriers' Association.

He has been endorsed by the Spanish-American War Veterans and the Grand Army Posts.

He has been endorsed by Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation of Labor.

He has made friends of his political enemies by doing his duty without regard to politics, person, creed or nationality.

He has secured many extensions of rural routes and several new routes.

He has proven that a farmer boy and country editor can do things.

He is running on his record for his second term and pledges himself to faithfully, honestly and conscientiously do his duty at all times, by all of the people. If his record and promises meet your approval you have a duty to perform on Tuesday, November 3d, towit: Look up his name under the rooster and see that it is marked thus:

OBITUARY

MR. THOMAS BLOUNT.

Mr. Thomas Blount, one of the best known residents of Licking county, died at his home in Perryton on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, after having been a sufferer with paralysis for the past five years. He had been a resident of Perryton for the past 52 years. He is survived by his widow and six children. The children are: Mrs. W. S. Evans, S. H. Blount, Della May Blount, Mrs. E. E. Fairall, Lulu M. Blount and Mrs. G. S. Reed. Mrs. E. E. Fairall and Mrs. G. S. Reed live in Newark. Besides these, he is survived by one sister, Mrs. Carrie Ross, who lives in Iowa. He was a faithful and consistent member of the Methodist church and was also a member of Perryton G. A. R. The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the M. E. church, the services being conducted by the Rev. Paul E. Kemper, and in the interment will be made in the cemetery at Perryton.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends who kindly assisted us during the death of our darling boy, Hoy Rugg, and for the beautiful floral offerings; also the H. G. A. and B. & O. blacksmiths and helpers and to Criss Bros. & Jones. Mother, Father and Sister.

How to Remove Iron Rust.

Iron rust may be removed from clothing by holding the stained spot over a bowl of water to which a little ammonia has been added and applying with a small glass rod or a little piece of wood 18 per cent muriatic acid. The instant the stain disappears immerse the spot in the water, thereby preventing the acid from changing the texture of the goods. Before using the muriatic acid it is best to test it on one corner of the goods

HOW ROOSEVELT FORCED TAFT'S NOMINATION

In support of the argument of Republicans that Taft was not in fact the choice of the party, it is shown that from ten Republican states, not including Kentucky and Tennessee, there were 216 delegates in the Chicago convention, nearly half of whom were federal office-holders, and that the entire vote of those ten states for the Republican candidate for President in 1904 was but 291,777, being less then that cast by Wisconsin, which had but 26 delegates in the convention. It was these 216 delegates, largely consisting of federal office-holders from ten southern states that enabled Roosevelt to dictate the nominaion of Taft, whose election he is now strenuously endeavoring to force upon the American people.

Up to date, the federal government has failed beautifully to put one single criminal trust official in jail. To Judge Taft belongs the distinction of sentencing a labor leader to the penitentiary for six months for alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The Democratic headquarters on the south side of the public square, present a lively scene every day now. There is quite a good supply of Democratic literature on hand and the distribution is being made to many of those who are interested in the condition of things today. Let the Democrats of old Licking made good use of the headquarters, and let all who can take some friend along.

Buffalo (N. Y.) Republic: If Taft's injunction plank wins out on November 3d, you might just as well turn in your union cards and close up your union halls. It will be all off with the labor movement. Then watch wages go down.

Zanesville Labor Journal: "One of the Taft sub-bosses in this neck of the woods remarked the other day that workingmen would be eating snow balls if his man was not elected. We wonder if the quality will be any different from the ones they have been eating for the past several months. The trouble with him is that workingmen have been doing their own thinking, and do not need the assistance or advice of any hireling in the employ or a party that launches such an enemy to workingmen in their midst much less expect them to vote for him. The party that has named Bryan as its standard bearer gives promise of some relief, while he party that Taft belongs to turns our people down with scorn. Thus Bryan will receive the votes of the majority of organized labor."

In the game of life the man who holds the upper hand is often bluffed out.

Some people don't believe half they hear, even when they tell it themselves.

JUDGE R. M. VOORHEES.

A distinguished lawyer and respected jurist of Central Ohio, whose mastery of the principles of law have given character to the profession, who has been tried on the bench and not found wanting, is Judge R. M. Voorhees of Coshocton, the Democratic candidate for Circuit Judge of the Fifth Circuit.

Judge Voorhees was admitted to the bar on July 6, 1860, and was a successful young lawyer in Coshocton when the civil war broke out. He enlisted on the first call for troops, and after and afterward became captain of Co. F, 65th Ohio. He was severely wounded at the battle of Stone River, and served with distinction until the close of the war.

Returning home he entered into the work of his profession. He attained high honors among his fellows, and in 1898, his merits received the recognition they so justly deserved, in the nomination and election to a Judgeship on the Circuit bench of the Fifth Judicial Circuit.

He was nominated for the same office in 1904, but as that was the year of the "Roosevelt landslide" he was defeated, though he ran ahead of his ticket.

Because of his extraordinary judicial temperament, coupled with his admirable social qualities, the Democrats at the convention held at Mt. Vernon, June 11th, for the third time honored him with a nomination, a distinction never given to another in this circuit.

Judge Voorhees' efficiency is well known. He established a record for faithful competent service. His return to the bench is advocated by the bar of Coshocton county and by many other lawyers throughout the circuit, regardless of party affiliation.

ASSIGNMENTS

Of Democratic Meetings and Speakers By the County Central Committee.

Democratic enthusiasm is running high in old Licking. Not for years has such general interest been manifested in a campaign as that shown by the Democrats this year, and there is a general demand for speakers from all parts of the country. In view of the unprecedented enthusiasm shown by the people for their leaders, Bryan for President, and Harmon for Governor of Ohio, and the desire of all Democrats to put their shoulders to the wheel this fall, the Democratic County Central committee has made arrangements to hold big Democratic rallies in every part of the county, at which Bryan clubs will be organized. Meetings and assignments have been made as follows:

Friday, Oct. 16, Liberty Township House—B. F. McDonald, J. H. Miller.

Friday, Oct. 16, Linnville, Bowling Green twp.—E. M. P. Brister, Roderic Jones.

Saturday, Oct. 17, Alexandria, St. Albans twp.—B. F. McDonald, Chas. L. Flory.

HIGH SCHOOL LECTURE COURSE

PRINCIPAL WILLIAMS DESERVING OF CREDIT FOR SECURING GOOD NUMBERS.

Tickets for Season, With Reserved Seat Privilege, Cost $1.50. Maud Ballington Booth To Be Here.

In Wednesday's Advocate the first three numbers of the High school lecture course were mentioned. Of the three mentioned, two, Governor Johnson and the Hungarian orchestra, will cost, single admission, 50 cents each. Single admission to the fourth number, Strickland W. Gillilan, the humorist, on January 30, will be 35 cents. He has been one of the most popular of Lyceum attractions in the state. He has filled over 65 Ohio dates, many of them being return engagements. A good humorist is one of the most entertaining of platform speakers. Press notices claim that with Gillilan it is a case of "Laughter holding both his sides."

For 20 years Roney's Boys have held a unique and unrivalled position among entertainers. They were called to Washington by President Roosevelt and there they rendered the music for the largest social function that ever assembled in the historic east room of the national capitol. It was of this concert company that the president said: "I would see these boys before senators, congressmen or anybody else." Principal Williams of the High school deserves much credit for the effort he made in securing this number for Feb. 17. Single admission, 25 cents.

Little need be said of Maud Ballington Booth, who appears here in March. The "Little Mother" of the prisons, as she has been called, is considered to be the greatest woman orator in the United States. The money she earns—and she receives the highest price ever paid a woman lecturer in the United States—goes to support her two Hope Halls, for prisoners discharged or paroled from penal institutions. Single admission tickets will sell for 50 cents.

The tickets for the season of six numbers cost $1.50. This includes reserved seat privilege. Single admission to three of the numbers will amount to $1.50. Get a season ticket and be assured of a good seat. They are on sale at Hall's drug store.

Inquiry has been made as to the use of the funds derived from the course. As it is not the intention to make the course a money-making enterprise, exceptionally high-priced talent has been secured. If money remains after expenses are met, it is to be divided as follows: Forty per cent. to the High school library; 40 per cent. to be used in purchasing works of art for the various rooms; 20 per cent to athletics. The tickets are selling briskly. Reserves for the season will be given out in time for the first entertainment on next Wednesday night.

A Guaranteed Cure for Pimples.

Zemo, a clean liquid for external use, draws the germs and their toxins to the surface of the skin and destroys them, leaving the skin clear and healthy. Two to six bottles will cure any case of pimples and blackheads.

For sale everywhere. Write for sample. E. W. Rose Medicine Co., St. Louis. For sale by Evans Drug Store. 4

TUNGSTEN LIGHT THE REAL THING

The line of advertising talk now being put up by Mr. J. I. Matthias, manager for the Licking Light and Power company, is attracting a great deal of attention from users of electricity. The reason that it's interesting is that Mr. Matthias is telling the people some electrical facts in plain United States language. Heretofore too much has been like Greek to the average citizen.

When an advertiser can tell a straightforward story like the Licking Light and Power company is doing, and can demonstrate where a patron or a prospective buyer can save money and at the same time better his condition, it is no wonder the people are getting interested.

Tonight a practical lighting demonstration will be given with the new Tungsten lamps in Newark store windows. This new light is the real thing. It beats the ordinary electric light a block and the beauty of it is it's cheaper to operate. Read the company's advertisement in another column. There's a prize in it worth having for some local merchant who can figure.

Doan's Regulets cure constipation, tone the stomach, stimulates the liver, promote digestion and appetite and easy passage of the bowels. Ask your druggist for them. 25c a box.

DR. J. N. M'CORMACK

WILL GIVE FREE LECTURE IN THIS CITY TUESDAY EVENING AT TAYLOR HALL.

Speaker a Leader in Health Work of County Medical Society.

Dr. J. N. McCormack, lecturer of the American Medical association, will speak in this city at Taylor Hall on next Tuesday evening. Dr. McCormack, who is secretary of the State Board of Health of Kentucky, is one of the best known medical lecturers in this country. His lecture will be free.

His lecture here will be for the general health topics with which everyone should be familiar. He also touches upon "Things About Doctors That the Public Ought to Know." In the state of Alabama recently the legislature adjourned and went in a joint body to hear Dr McCormack's lecture, which was afterward pronounced an uplift to civilization and educational in the highest sense, being intended for audiences consisting of the laity as well as the medical profession.

Dr. McCormack comes to this city under the auspices of the Licking County Medical Society. The society finds that the recent discussions in the tuberculosis congress in Washington, show that the health of the people is largely in their own hands and they say, as the ones vitally interested, ought to know how to best preserve that greatest of blessings, good health, and to protect themselves against the ravages of disease, which annually costs millions of dollars, to say nothing of the anxiety, worry and sorrow, much of which, at least, is preventable. The society also feels that Newark is not behind in general progress, and, therefore a large and representative meeting is anticipated.

A BIG BLACK SPIDER.

A big black spider who had his web outside—sought for the winter a home to provide; so watching his chance he crawled in through the door, and thought in a corner he'd hide on the floor; but the floor had been finished with Spartan Stain—and it gave this black spider an awful pain. Said he, 'to the cellar I'll have to go, for I never could live in this room I know." Spartan Stain possesses certain hygienic properties which act as a disinfectant and destructive agent upon bacterial germs. Manufactured by The Marietta Paint & Color Co., Marietta, Ohio. # SUPREME COURT

Decides Two Licking County Cases, Vermillion vs. Myers and Compensation for Receiver.

The Supreme court decided two Licking county cases this week. One was the case of Frank Vermillion vs. John H. Myers, and was an action which involved the right of the trustees of Hopewell township to turn the water from a hillside road which had accumulated in its descent off this road onto the adjoining landowner. On the trial of the case several plats and a number of photographs were introduced in evidence. The plaintiff, through Kibler & Montgomery, his attorneys, made a motion to dispense with printing these exhibits. The court sustained the motion and ordered the exhibits not to be printed.

The other case was that of Albert Webb, administrator of George P. Webb, deceased, vs. Joseph N. Pugh, receiver of the Homestead Building and Savings company. It was an appeal from the decision of the Common Pleas court fixing the compensation of Webb as receiver of the company until the time of his death, a period of three years and two months. The administrators of Webb were dissatisfied with the amount allowed by the Common Pleas court and took the case to the Circuit court, which court dismissed the case and in effect affirmed the Common Pleas court. The case went to the Supreme court and was argued by C. W. Miller for Webb and Kibler & Montgomery for Pugh. The Supreme court declined to entertain the case and judgment of the Common Pleas court became final.

Registration booths will be open from 4 until 9 o'clock this evening.

How to Can Peaches.

To can peaches allow one-half pound of sugar to one pound of peaches. Put the sugar on the fire with a little water and let boil until the sirup is perfectly clear. Pack the jars tightly with the peaches and fill with the sirup. Put these jars in a large boiler of water. Stand them on wood and do not let them touch each other. The water should be within three inches from top of the jar. Cover the boiler and boil until tender. When the water is cold remove the jars, fill up with boiling water and seal air tight.

PITTSBURG CASH GROCERY

The Store That Sells More Goods and Better Goods Cheaper Than Any Other House in Newark

MADAM: Regularly every month for the past 11 months, we have been sending you circulars and price lists and advising you to adopt the CASH SYSTEM of buying goods. We have many customers who tell us they would never go back to the credit system again. Why? Because it is economy. Because it is by the mysterious power of economy, it has been said, that the loaf is multiplied, that using does not waste, that little becomes much, that scattered fragments grow to unity, and that out of nothing, or next to nothing, comes the miracle of something. It is not merely saving, still less parsimony. It is foresight and arrangement, insight and combination, causing inert things to serve our necessities, perishing things to renew their vigor, and all things to exert themselves for human comforts.

Because what you save on your groceries you can spend for the other comforts of life.

Because to do your best you must own every bit of yourself. If you are in debt, part of you belongs to your creditor. Nothing is so paralyzing to ambition as debt.

Because with the cash in your pocket you are master of your destinies.

People buy goods of us because they can buy better goods for less money than from anyone else. That is the reason we are patronized, and for nothing else. We have the goods, and are going to sell them at the lowest possible price.

There is no friendship about this matter, it is strictly business. There is only one question, if you want to buy good goods at the lowest possible market prices, you can buy them from us.

I am always watching the market for the best goods at the lowest prices, and with the lowest expense of any Cash House in the city.

People say he can't do this and he can't do that. "The proof o the pudding is the eating." If I say a thing, I will do it. How much can you lose? If the goods are not just as I say they are, you can return the goods. My clerks are instructed not to misrepresent anything.

I don't send a man around to your house every week to insist on your trade. Why? Because we want you to come to the store and see the goods for yourself. Second, because the cost of that man will add 5 per cent. more to the cost of your goods, which you must help to pay. We do business in a business way, by keeping down expenses on an increased volume of business.

We are prompt in delivering goods. We are clean in delivering goods. We watch the interests of our customers.

THE BOTTLE TREE.

A Life Saver For Cattle During the Australian Droughts.

"It was like a real bottle, thirty feet high, covered with the bark of a box tree and with a gum tree growing out where the cork ought to be."

Such was the way in which an Englishman described the first bottle tree which came under his notice, and truly one who does not know the tree its sudden appearance in his pathway, often in the midst of dense scrub, must make a vivid impression.

The lower part of the trunk is thick and cylindrical, decreasing in size toward the top, its shape being that of a gigantic living bottle, from the neck of which spring the only branches and leaves that the tree possesses. In this respect it carries to an excess the peculiarity of most Australian trees—namely, their lack of branches for a considerable distance up the stem.

The bark is of grayish color and is very hard, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, but the wood inside is soft and moist. The latter can be chewed in the same way as sugar cane, but as it lacks its sweet, pleasant taste it is rarely used in this way. This peculiar characteristic of the tree, however, makes it a valuable food for cattle.

Indeed, during the long droughts which occasionally visit Australia hundreds of settlers have to thank the bottle tree for saving them from ruin. Sometimes for more than a year and in the inland districts for still longer periods scarcely a drop of rain falls.

Every blade of grass is dried, tanks become empty, creeks no longer run and in many cases dry up altogether, as do nearly all water holes and lagoons; cultivation is impossible, and fodder for cattle and horses is extremely difficult to procure. Then the bottle tree comes to the rescue. Every scrub is searched for these living bottles, and everywhere is heard the ringing of axes as the strange, attractive trees are laid low.

As soon as the trunk has been stripped of its bark the cattle are brought to it if within easy distance, and there they remain till neither leaves nor wood is left. In places where the settlers have no scrubs of their own they will drive many miles in order to obtain a wagon load of this great treasure.

Sometimes instead of allowing the animals free access to the tree the settlers cut the trunk into strips, put the strips through the cutter and thus make a substitute for proper chaff.

In many instances during a drought, except for prickly pears and the foliage of trees, cattle are fed on these living bottles alone, and they have been the means of saving large quantities of stock.

It seems strange that in the absence of rain these trees should retain their moist interior, as the majority of others look dry and drought stricken.

But throughout all the bottle tree flourishes, lifting its dark green leaves toward the sky, whither the farmers and squatters turn longing eyes in hopes of the wished for rain.

When the dry season ends and the land in a very few weeks is covered with fresh green grass, the work of the bottle tree is done. But, mindful of its past usefulness, no farmer unless under absolute necessity fells this tree, and it may often be seen standing in solitary grandeur, its strange shape outlined against the blue sky, while the land at its base has been put under cultivation or has been converted into grazing grounds for the cattle.

Homemade Barometer.

Those who love experimentation may try the following method of making a cheap barometer practiced in France: Take eight grams of pulverized camphor, four grams of pulverized nitrate of potassium, two grams of pulverized nitrate of ammonia and dissolve in sixty grams of alcohol. Put the whole in a long, slender bottle closed at the top with a piece of bladder containing a pinhole to admit the air. When rain is coming the solid particles will tend gradually to mount, little star crystals forming in the liquid, which otherwise remains clear. If high winds are approaching the liquid will become thick, as if fermenting while a film of solid particles forms on the surface. During fair weather the liquid will remain clear and the solid particles will rest at the bottom.

SPENDING THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS EXPERIMENTING

The Scientist Made a Great Discovery.

When a man is in doubt it becomes his duty to investigate and when proof is piled upon proof it is time to be convinced. There is nothing in life so valuable as good health. The reporter of this article personally knows of several people here that are rapidly regaining their health because thely investigated the proofs produced by the Juice Root people and were convinced. We positively know that an eminent scientist devoted several years of his life to hard study and spent over ten thousand dollars experimenting before the afflicted were permitted to try his great discovery, which is now curing people all over the country, after all other remedies had failed If you bloat and belch sour gases, if your food lays heavy on the stomach; if you have any symptoms of indigestion, we honestly believe that one dose of Root Juice will convince you of its wonderful merits. Root Juice soothes and heals the mucous lining of the stomach, bowels and bladder and at the same time heals and strengthens the liver and kidneys. It prevents fermentation of food in the stomach and bowels and stops formation of acid by causing the digestive fluids to be supplied in sufficient quantities in a natural way and giving the liver and kidneys health and strength to do the work nature intended them to do. The blood will soon be filtered of all impurities and good rich blood will be made to nourish the whole body. Poor, weak women and dyspeptic, backaching, rheumatic men, take this advice before it is too late Go immediately and get a bottle of Root Juice. Now on sale, $1 a bottle, at the City Drug Store.

Injured Men Recovering.

The conditions of J. K. Barnes of Columbus, and Chetworth Briggs of Jefferson, O, engineers for the York Construction company, employed on their trenching machine when it took fire from a bursted gas main, Thursday, is said to be improved. Both men were severely burned, but will recover The damage to the big trencher will amount to probably $100, which is covered by insurance against fire.

YOUNG MAN

Meets With Bad Accident in B. & O. Yards on Thursday Evening.

A G Baxter, a well known B & O. yard brakeman, living on Barclay street, in the East End, was the victim of a serious accident Thursday night. Baxter who is aged about 24 and married, was engaged at work in the yards as usual. A cut of cars was being pulled out, when Mr. Baxter attempted to get on one of the cars. In doing so the grab iron pulled out, letting his right foot swing under the wheels. The injured man was taken to the Sanitarium in Jones & Criss Bros.' ambulance and his injuries attended to. While the foot was badly crushed it is thought that amputation will not be necessary. Dr. Barnes was the attending physician.

CHAPTER XIV.

OLGA looked angrily at the stormy little Elsa as she floundered from the room into the ballroom, followed by the enraged Karl. Millar smiled more cynically than ever as he saw the play of emotion on Olga's face. His ruse had worked admirably. He had at least beaten down Olga's will, but he had yet to make certain of Karl.

"How dared she speak like that?" Olga demanded, turning to her cynic Millar. "Karl must love her."

"Let us not reach conclusions so hastily," Millar said. "First let me tell you how Karl answered me this afternoon."

"When you made the wager?" Olga asked quickly.

"Yes; when I promised to make you fall in love with me."

"What did he say?"

"He tried to kill me," Millar answered slowly.

The color rushed to Olga's cheeks. Her eyes sparkled as she turned them toward her tempter. It was delight she felt—mad, unreasoning joy that Karl's love for her had prompted him to kill another who threatened to win her from him. Still smiling, Millar went on, taking the shining revolver from his pocket and showing it to her.

"With his own hands, dear lady, Karl tried to kill me with this little pistol. I took it away from him."

"He tried to shoot you?" Olga exclaimed.

"Yes, and he would have done so. This is nicely loaded for six."

Almost to herself Olga whispered her next words:

"This afternoon he wanted to kill you when you only spoke of making love to me, and now—he saw you whisper in my ear, hold my hand, touch my shoulders. Why, he must have fallen in love with"—

"Don't you think it silly to shoot a friend on account of a woman?" Millar interrupted before she could pronounce Elsa's name.

"Oh, he's fond of me. Perhaps you said something about me," Olga stumbled on hurriedly. "Karl holds me in high regard. But there is no doubt of it, these young people are in love."

"I fear you regret the success of your matrimonial scheme for Karl and Elsa," Millar said.

"Do you think it will be successful?" she asked eagerly.

"I don't know. But we may find out easily enough.

"How?"

Millar took a turn up and down the room, his upslanting eyebrows drawn together in deep thought.

"This afternoon he tried to shoot me when I told him I would make you fall in love with me," he said, stopping in front of Olga. "That means love. Don't speak to me of respect or regard, my dear lady. They fire off cannons in salute out of respect, but when they draw pistols that means love. Now, you think Karl loves this little girl. Suppose we find out who is right. We will make Karl tell us himself."

Olga turned away, with a gesture of dissent, but Millar went on insinuatingly:

"Of course I understand it interests you only because you planned this marriage, and, after all, it is only right that you should feel a certain amount of pride in the success of your plans. Is it not so?"

"Yes; that is true."

"Very well, then. Karl shall tell us which was real, his attempt to murder me or this little affair with Elsa."

"But how? You don't mean to ask Karl?" Olga asked in bewilderment. "You are not going to listen at keyholes?"

"Oh, madame, no."

"Then how can we make him tell us?"

"It is simple. I have a plan. But you must follow my instructions to the letter. Don't ask for any reasons. Simply do as I say."

Olga looked at him reflectively. She knew instinctively that he had some new bit of devilish ingenuity, some sinister twist of that marvelous brain, and she was afraid. But she wanted more than anything else to be assured that Karl did not love Elsa, that her scheme for their marriage had failed, and she replied:

"Very well. It is agreed."

"I saw you once at the opera with a very beautiful cloak that covered you completely from your neck to your shoe tips. Have you such a cloak now?"

"Yes."

"Good. Put this cloak on. Let only your bare neck show above it and the tips of your shoes beneath. Button it from top to bottom as if you felt cold. Then we shall need but the presence of yourself and Karl here in this room to solve the problem."

Olga looked at Millar a moment in silence. There flashed instantly through her mind the full meaning of his daring suggestion, and at first she was on the point of indignant refusal. Then she as quickly resolved to carry out the scheme—to beat the man at his own cunning game, to find out for herself what Karl really felt.

"Unconditionally obey me, and we shall know everything," Millar assured her, observing her hesitation.

"This is very mysterious," Olga said slowly. "What strange influence do you possess that compels me to obey your will? Your eyes seem to have all the wisdom of the world behind them."

"You do my eyes poor, scant justice," Millar replied. "Now go, dear madame. If any one expresses astonishment that you wear a cloak indoors simply say that you felt cold."

"It really is cold," Olga said, with a little shiver as they turned away.

"Out this way," Millar said quickly, pointing to the palms and a door beyond them. "Karl is coming."

Olga gathered her skirts up and hurried from the room just as Karl entered. The young artist caught a glimpse of her dress as she disappeared behind the palms. He looked at Millar, with jealous rage making his eyes glow.

"Who was that?" he demanded.

"Who?" Millar asked blandly.

"Did Olga run away from me?"

"No one ran from you that I know of, Karl. That is a pretty girl, my young friend, that little Elsa."

"Yes, she is pretty," Karl replied absently, sitting down at a table.

He was still tortured by the sight of Millar leaning over Olga, touching her hands, whispering in her ear. He was tormented by the insinuating words the man had uttered in the afternoon when he swore that Olga should love him, should be his. He would have liked to take Millar's throat in his two hands and throttle him.

Keenly aware of the inferno he had raised in Karl, Millar continued to chat affably. Karl not deigning to answer. Finally Millar said:

"You seem annoyed."

Karl lost control of himself and leaped to his feet. He went close to Millar, staring into his eyes.

"I am annoyed. Do you want to know why?" he demanded, putting all the insolence he could command into his tone.

"No," Millar replied, with a smile.

"I want to tell you why," Karl declared.

"Please don't," Millar said deprecatingly.

"Yes, I will," Karl went on belligerently. "I am amazed at the change which has come over you since this afternoon. Don't imagine that it is on account of Olga. We won't discuss her at all."

"Certainly not! She is out of the question," Millar assented warmly.

"Absolutely," Karl went on. "I came here this evening determined to ask Elsa to marry me."

"Fine! I am very glad to hear it. I wish you good luck, my boy!" Millar cried, with enthusiasm.

"You are glad?"

"Delighted!" Millar assured him.

"It does not take you long to change your mind," Karl continued, still with a truculent air. "This afternoon you insisted I should not marry Elsa. Tonight you are delighted at the prospect."

"Oh, yes. I see the matter now in a different light."

"Then it was Olga who ran away as I entered!" Karl almost shouted, glaring at him menacingly.

"Ran away! Why should she run away?" Millar asked, pretending embarrassment.

"Don't act like a cad!" Karl cried threateningly.

"What do you mean, Karl?"

"I mean exactly what I say. Don't act like a cad. If you were a gentleman you would hide your pleasure."

Millar pretended to be shocked at the indignation of the young artist, which secretly delighted him.

"Don't talk that way, Karl," he urged. "As you seem to have penetrated my secret, I suppose I might as well—but have you made up your mind to marry Elsa?"

"Absolutely."

"And you will not change your mind. You promise?"

"I will not change my mind."

"Well, of course if that is the case I can tell you. I"—

He hesitated as if embarrassed at his own question. Karl cried roughly:

"And did you succeed?"

"Well, I"—

"What of her husband?"

"Ah, Karl, he is deaf, dumb and blind!" Millar cried gleefully.

Stifled with the pain at his heart, Karl turned away.

"This afternoon at my house you met her for the first time," he said.

"Ah, Karl, she is a clever woman, cleverer than I thought," Millar said, affecting tremendous enthusiasm. "She deceived me this afternoon about her true character; she has been deceiving all of you. I am sure of it. Oh, she is grand, fantastic, passionate, daring. Think of it, Karl," he went on, going close to the boy and leaning over him, bringing out his words so that every one seemed to penetrate his heart—"think of it, tonight a kiss behind a door in front of which her husband was standing. Danger fascinates her. And just now, a moment before you came in, we agreed"—

"So it was she?" Karl interrupted.

"Oh, yes; it was she," Millar admitted. "I suggested a wild plan, Karl; almost too daring for the first day of our acquaintance. Her honor, position, everything depends upon its success. Of course I did not dream she would carry it out. I suggested it merely to sound the depths of her passion. But she loved the idea and insisted upon doing it this very night. If it fails we are lost."

Karl trembled with apprehension for Olga, whom he believed in the devilish powers of this man.

"What is it?" he asked.

"She will be here in one minute, dressed in an opera cloak and nothing else. Think of it, Karl, the daring of it. She will walk through the ballroom on my arm among all those people, her friends, her husband, with no one in the secret but we two—and you. Ah, Karl, I told you she would be mine," Millar concluded, with rapturous accents.

With a wild cry Karl sprang at Millar, hurling one word at him:

"Liar!"

"Karl, be careful," Millar protested, avoiding him.

"It's a lie, a damnable, dirty lie!" Karl cried, trying blindly to reach him, to grasp his throat, to throttle him.

Millar deftly avoided him and laughed triumphantly.

"I have trapped you who tried to trap me," he cried. "You love Olga Hoffmann."

"Yes, I love her," Karl cried loudly. "I love her, and yet I will marry Elsa. Now, I have listened to your infernal lies. I have watched you gloat over them. Men like you steal a woman's reputation and boast of it and call it success. But you shall pay for it now, this minute, when I kick you out of the house. Out with you, like a sneak thief that you are."

He advanced determinedly on Millar, who quietly faced him.

"Remember, Karl, that I have the pistol now," he said coolly.

"Out with you, you sneak thief. I am not afraid of you," Karl cried again.

He was about to seize Millar by the throat when he started back in amazement at what seemed to be the fulfillment of the other's sinister promise. Olga stepped through the door into the room. She was clothed from head to foot in a beautiful, shimmering, fur trimmed cloak.

Above the top button gleamed her bare throat. Her white arms projected from the short sleeves. The hem of the skirt fell to the tips of her white satin shoes.

CHAPTER XV.

AS Olga entered she gave one glance at Karl and then moved away from him and stood beside the table at which she and Millar had been seated. She saw the wild rage stamped on his face, and her woman's intuition made her know that Millar had told him what she had divined he meant. The situation frightened her, and she felt on the point of fleeing from the room or casting aside the cloak, but she resolved to see the game through.

Karl stared at her, rage giving place to amazement, then to despair. For full a minute no one spoke. The music floated in softly from the ballroom, mingled with the hum of voices and laughter. Olga was the first to break the stillness, but she did not look at him as she spoke.

"Karl, this is the first time I have had a chance to talk with you tonight," she said.

"What is that?" Karl absently asked. He had not heard. His mind was confused, bewildered. Millar, cynically misunderstanding his question, said quickly:

"Why, that is an opera cloak."

Olga turned quickly, fearful that the remark might cause an eruption which she could not control. She cried impulsively, seeking to divert the threatening train of conversation:

"The ball is a great success. Every one is merry; every one dances as if it were the first affair of the season. The girls are all as happy as young widows who have just taken off mourning."

"I have observed it," Millar agreed, with enthusiasm. "It is splendid. But why is Karl so sad amid all this merrymaking?" he added.

"Why are you sad, Karl?" Olga asked, turning to him.

"I sad? You are silly," Karl cried, with forced gayety. "I never felt happier in all my life."

There was a touch of hysteria in his voice that made Olga's heart go out to him.

"I am glad you are having such a good time," she said.

"Yes, yes; I feel like a schoolboy," Karl cried wildly, "like a young tiger. I'm mad with joy. I will get drunk tonight. I will drink, drink, drink, until the angels in heaven sing to me, as you said this afternoon," he added, turning to Millar.

"No, no, Karl," Olga pleaded, thoroughly frightened. "Why, you never drank. Why should you drink tonight?"

"Because I am doing things tonight I never did before," Karl replied bitterly. "I have never been engaged before. Tonight I shall be engaged."

"Good, fine, Karl," Millar exclaimed. "She is a splendid girl."

"Splendid girl! What do I care what sort of a girl she is. It's not the girl; it's marriage—something new. I want to see what it is like."

"For a bridegroom you are not very gay," Millar said tauntingly.

"Gay! Why should I be gay? I am drinking the last bitter drops of my bachelor days, but I'll swallow them, and then—purity."

"Bravo, Karl," Olga said.

"Oh, I don't care what any one else thinks about it," Karl sneered at her. "I am doing this to please myself."

Olga was hurt and surprised at his tone. She had never seen him so completely beside himself before. She had never heard him speak so bitterly, so vindictively. As she watched him he looked at her, and a spasm of pain contorted his face. He pointed his finger at her accusingly and cried:

"Why are you wearing that cloak in the house?"

"Mme. Hoffmann may be cold," Millar suggested quietly.

"Yes, yes; I am cold," Olga said hurriedly, drawing the cloak around her more closely.

"You are fortunate to have such a beautiful cloak," Millar said, determined now to keep them at the main point of his game.

"Suppose we do not talk about the cloak?" Olga said. "You and Elsa seemed to get on nicely tonight, Karl."

"Yes," he replied absently.

"Really, it was charming to watch such a devoted young couple," Millar said.

Karl flashed a look of hatred at him and turned again to Olga.

"That cloak is lined with fur, isn't it?"

Before she could reply Millar had interposed in his silken, insinuating voice:

"Yes—soft, smooth fur."

"I did not speak to you!" Karl cried at him savagely. "Well?" he demanded of Olga.

"Soft, smooth fur," Olga replied. "It is cold in here."

"Nonsense! It is hot. I feel stifling," Karl declared.

"I feel chilly," Olga insisted.

"Perhaps madame is not dressed warmly enough," Millar insinuated. "You should wear plenty of clothes in the winter time or you may run the chance of taking cold."

Olga caught her breath, and then she answered:

"I love to take chances."

"You do, eh?" Karl cried.

"Yes. What is it to you?" she asked tauntingly.

Karl threw his self control to the winds. With flaming face and a voice that shook with anger he cried:

"Aren't you two afraid of me?"

Olga was afraid, and she looked at him apprehensively. Millar smiled his cynical, sinister smile and answered:

"Afraid? I'm not afraid of the husband. Why should I be afraid of a moralizing, joyless bridegroom?"

Karl took a step toward him when Herman entered the room. All three were silent, and Herman looked at them in surprise.

"What is this, a conspiracy?" he asked gayly.

"Oh, no; merely a conversation," Millar said.

"Well, Karl, how are you getting along with Elsa?" Herman asked, taking the boy by the arm and walking off with him.

Olga watched them as they disappeared going into the ballroom, Karl evidently reluctant to be taken away. Then she turned to Millar.

"What did you tell him about my cloak?"

"About the cloak? Nothing."

"You did not tell him"—

"What?"

"He stared at me as if he thought—thought I had on only this cloak."

"That is exactly what I told him," Millar assured her.

"Oh, how could you?"

"Now, don't be shocked," Millar said cynically. "You knew it. The moment you entered the room you realized that I had told him, and, what is more, you liked it."

"How dare you!" Olga gasped. "If I had understood"—

"If you had understood, would you have taken off the cloak?"

"Yes."

"Well, now you understand, why do you not take it off?"

Olga raised her head and looked straight into Millar's eyes. She said not a word, but drew her cloak more closely about her with a movement that sent a thrill of suspicion and surprise through him.

"Madame, you didn't really!" he cried in amazement.

"Do you think I am a child?" she asked. "Do you imagine that I did not understand your suggestion from the very first? You wanted me to fool Karl. Perhaps I have fooled you. How do you know I am not nude beneath this cloak?"

"Madame!" Millar cried in wide eyed amazement.

"Now let us see if you will take a chance," Olga said. "Give me your arm, my dear doctor, and we will walk together through the ballroom."

Millar was at a loss for a moment. His imperturbable calm was broken. Olga had matched her woman's intuition against his cunning and had won. But his bewilderment gave way to undisguised admiration, and, bowing as gallantly as a youthful sweetheart, he gave her his arm.

As they were about to leave, however, Karl suddenly barred their way coming hurriedly in from the ballroom.

"Are you coming in with us, Karl?" Olga asked as they paused.

"No," Karl almost shouted, "and you are not going! You stay here!"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean what I said. You stay here. And you, too," he added to Millar.

He turned and closed the ballroom door. Then he faced them again.

"We will settle this thing right here. Take off that cloak."

"I will not."

"By heavens, I'll tear it off!" he cried furiously, rushing at her.

Olga stood unmoved. Millar caught Karl by the arm and stopped him.

"Why did you stop him?" Olga asked, smiling.

She was perfectly self possessed now and in command of the situation. Millar was frankly afraid that she had taken his meaning literally. Karl was mad with rage and jealousy. Olga was unruffled.

"Madame, I was afraid," Millar said.

"You will take it off," Karl cried, still held back by Millar. "If you do not, I'll find your husband, and he shall have the pleasure."

Olga turned to him sweetly.

"Karl, will you help me off with my cloak?" she asked.

Karl almost leaped toward her. But when his hands nearly touched her cloak he drew back, afraid. Slowly he backed away from her, while she smiled.

"Dr. Millar, will you help me remove my cloak?" she asked sweetly.

Millar put out his hands as if to do so, but quickly folded them over his breast, bowed very low and smiled cynically, shaking his head.

Olga looked first at one and then the other with her tantalizing smile. The three might have been carved of stone so still were they when Herman entered.

"Hello, Karl! I lost you when I went to find Elsa," he said. "What are you talking about?"

"I think we have been discussing cloaks," Millar said.

"Oh, I see Olga is wearing one. Isn't it rather warm for that, dear?"

"Yes, it is. But I felt chilly awhile ago," Olga answered. "Will you help me off with it, Herman?"

Herman stepped to her side as she loosened the clasps and lifted the beautiful fur lined garment from her shoulders. She stood before them again in the beauty of her shimmering evening gown, her white arms and shoulders gleaming, her lips parted in a dazzling smile.

CURE FOR ECZEMA DISCOVERED.

Dr. E. Currier Tells How It Can Be Used By the Patients Themselves.

(From Chicago Examiner.

"Eczema, tetter, ringworm and other skin diseases are spreading," says Dr. J. E. Currier in the Doctor's Guide, writing about a new and wonderfully successful cure for skin affections.

"I apply plain pure citrox, dissolved in hot water, twice a day. You who know how stubborn tetter, ringworm and eczema can, be, will be amazed to see soon this stops the itching, dries up the eruption and causes a growth of new healthy skin. I now tell my patients to get a package of pure citrox at the drug store and dissolve a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of hot water, as this solution must be made fresh each time and used warm.

"I am having better success than ever before. A case of tetter on the hand that had run six months, citrox cured in a week; and a young woman whose back was a mass of pustules was cured in two weeks. I could cite many others. Be careful to get the pure drug put up in small, sealed packages, as the common kind sold in bulk is not fit for medicinal use."

It will interest women to learn that this well-known drug's value for skin disease was discovered accidentally by the doctor's wife.

GRANVILLE

Granville, Oct 16.—While Denison University of Granville can boast of its students having organized the first Harmon club in the State, it can now boast of having organized the first Socialist club. There are quite a number of the students of the university with socialistic tendencies, and after some discussion of the matter they met and organized a Socialist club with the following officers: President, T. F. Sowers: vice president, H. J. Walker; secretary, J. F. Finnie: treasurer, L. E. Mitchell: librarian, H. E. Nottingham. The purpose of the club is to propagate Socialism, and the members of the club decided to go to Newark Monday evening and listen to Eugene Debs, the Socialist candididare for President, who is to speak at the B. & O. depot from 5:15 to 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Elliott of Toledo, who have been visiting relatives in the eastern part of the State, passed through the village Thursday on their way to their home in Bucyrus.

It is reported that the Heisey well, No. 2, located on the Charles Guckert farm on Loudon street, several miles north of the village, came in Thursay, with a splendid flow. It is estimated that the well is good for at least two million and it may go three million. When the gas was struck the drill was in 28 feet of sand. This company is putting down No. 3 and No. 4 derrick is being built. No. 1 came in some time ago with a flow of over one million.

At the Methodist church Sunday, there will be preaching by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Miller both morning and evening. In the evening he will preach on "John Wesley, the Prophet." Class meeting will be held at 9:30 a m; Sunday school at 11 a. m.: Junior League at 2:30 p. m.: Epworth League at 6:15 p. m.. and prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7 o'clock

On Thursday evening in Recital Lall of Denison university a most delightful reading was given by Miss Eckert, a former teacher in the gymnasium and elocution department of Denison. The selection was Rosmersholm," by Ibsen, and was read in four acts. Miss Eckert's ability as a reader is well known by Granville people, who turned out in numbers to hear her last night, when her reading was quite unusual and exceptional.

Mr. Morgan Jones, who has been living on the farm of the Rev. F. C. Wright, two and a half miles north of Granville, for the past several years, is making preparations to remove to Florida, where he expects to make his future home. It is reported that his daughter, Miss Mary Jones, who has been keeping house for her father, is soon to be married. Rev. Mr. Wright will move on the farm

Altamaha Lodge, No. 296, Knights of Pythias, held a well attended meeting on Wednesday night of this week, at which an entertainment committee was appointed to arrange for a social entertainment to be held in the near future. the time to be decided a the next meeting.

A unique innovation was inaugurated by the selling of the periodicals at auction in the reading room of Cleveland Hall. The auction was held at 8 o'clock in the evening and there were quite a number of bidders on hand who were not slow in running up the prices. The papers all brought good prices and the proceeds will be used to purchase new reading matter.

Robert Goodrich left for Florida Thursday night.

PROCTER & GAMBLE P&G NAPHTHA SOAP

Ordinary Naphtha Soap is Yellow

Because of the rosin in it. P. & G. Naphtha Soap is white—no rosin in it.

Rosin is cheap.

That is why most manufacturers of naphtha soap use it.

P. & G. Naphtha Soap is white.

There is no rosin in it; nothing but high grade soap and refined kerosene.

P. & G. Naphtha Soap does its work quickly, easily and thoroughly.

It does far better work with cold (or lukewarm) water than ordinary laundry soaps do, with boiling water.

Use it and get rid of practically all the discomfort of wash day—the boiling of clothes; the hard rubbing up and down the wash board; the necessity of keeping a hot fire going all day long. 31

RAILWAY AFFAIRS

The B. & O. handled the "Devil" company from Newark to Mansfield Thursday morning. It came in over the Panhandle.

"Colonel Bill" Shaw, district passenger agent of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincey, and for nearly a quarter of a century one of the conspicuous characters in the railroad world, being known from coast to coast, is finally out of the running. He has sent his resignation to headquarters.

Brakeman Herbert Carlisle of the B. & O., is visiting his parents at Union Station for a week or two.

The coke trade is reported as being very heavy on the Panhandle road just now. Quite a number of west bound trains have recently passed through the city loaded with coke.

Baltimore and Ohio Engineer Will iam Haver, who has been on the sick list for the past two months, is rapidly recvering and will be able to report for duty in a few days.

Painters are busy painting the trimming on the Panhandle depot, which will add greatly to the appearace of the building.

By the Sea.

[Original]

One summer moonlight night I was by the waves. I would rather be near them on moonlight nights than at any other time, especially when broken clouds give the sky and the waters variety. I never go to the hotels. I get as far away from them as I can, stopping usually at some fisherman's cottage. On this occasion I had pitched a tent on the beach and inhabited it alone. I was lying under my canopy, the flaps thrown aside so that from my bed—blankets only—I could look out on the ocean. There was the sky, light clouds slowly drifting across the face of the moon, the line of the horizon dividing the lighter from the darker hemisphere. The ocean plane met the path of moonlight broadening toward me from afar, the waves lazily rolling in and bursting on the shore.

I have wondered since if the music of the waters put me to sleep and I awakened or whether I did not sleep. At any rate, my attention was arrested by something white, at least lighter than the sand, down near the verge. I watched it. There was an occasional fluttering about it, like a woman's skirts gently moved by a breeze. It appeared to be about the height of a human figure, though really in my perception of it there was no such thing as size, and was gently swaying like a very young tree shaken by the wind.

Presently it moved. Then I was conscious that it was coming toward me. I had no superstitious fear. I was simply curious. As the thing approached it came gradually out of nebula into the form of a woman. There was a certain grace of movement, a lightness which, mingled with a slight rising and falling, was confusing. Had the figure appeared on the water surface I should have thought my eyes were transfiguring a sail that was rising and falling on the waves.

It was only when it came near that I distinguished the outline of a girl's figure—not a summer visitor, one of planer mold, doubtless a fisher lassie. She stopped a few yards from me, turned and looked out on the ocean. Then, turning again without appearing to notice or care who was in the tent, she asked:

"Is that a boat out there?"

"What are you doing out here at this time of night? Do you know what time it is?"

"No."

I drew my watch from my vest pocket. I slept in my clothes. "It's half past 1."

"Is it?" She manifested no interest at the hour. She stood looking out at sea, apparently watching for another sight at the boat.

"There it is. Heavens, how they bend to the work!"

I raised myself on my elbows and strained my eyes to discern if I could see what the girl saw. Surely there was no boat out where she was looking. The dark face of the ocean was expressionless except where the moonlight trailed over it.

"I see no boat," I said.

"It's in the trough of the sea now."

"There is but a slight trough. Even if a boat were lost to sight between the waves it would reappear in a few moments."

She stood peering out on the ocean. A cloud floated over the moon. She said with a moan, a note of despair, rather, it seemed to me:

"Oh, how black!"

The cloud was denser than any that had obscured the moon before. The last words I heard spoken by the girl were, "They're coming," and she began to move toward the ocean, fading away in the shadow of the cloud. When it passed I looked for her, but she was nowhere to be seen. I lay thinking, wondering, for awhile, then, lulled by the waves, fell asleep.

When I awoke the sun was rising out of the ocean, while the waves were plashing languidly. The first thing I thought of was the girl of the night before. I drifted between many opinions. Possibly I may have dreamed it all. But never before had I dreamed about one a stranger to me whose face and figure I could remember, while hers I remembered distinctly. Was she not some girl who had been demented by misfortune?

I went to breakfast at a fisherman's cabin. It was a rude place, the only decoration being a lithograph of the Virgin Mary, but I got there plenty of sea food. The fisherman was preparing to go out in his boat while his wife waited on me. I was full of my dream, or whatever it was, and related it.

The man stopped his preparations and listened with a look of horror, making the sign of the cross, while his wife turned and covered her eyes with her hands.

I looked at them wonderingly. It was plain that I had struck some blight in their lives. Should I probe it by questions or spare them? What had I to gain by forcing a recital that would give them infinite pain? If there was any connection between them and my apparition it needed no strong imagination to replace it.

Lying in my tent during that day I wove the story. I saw a ship out on the bar, the waves beating furiously against it. The shore was lined with people. Presently a boat was lowered, and a crew from the wreck made an attempt for their lives. It rose and fell on the waves, its bow now pointing to the sky, its stern now sliding down out of sight. Then it hung for one instant on the seething line of foam and was hurled bottom upward.

Perhaps it contained the girl's lover.

TO TICKLE THE PALATE.

Corn Bread Made With Snow an Epicure's Tidbit.

It is not probable that every one knows that corn bread made with snow is delicious. It is the bread of the epicures.

Naturally it must be made in winter. It is served hot for breakfast or luncheon.

Take a quart of meal and stir into it half a teaspoonful of good suet lard. Add a teaspoonful of salt. Stir in a quart of light, clean snow, doing it in a cool place where the snow will not melt.

Bake it about forty minutes in a quick oven. Do not cut this bread, but break it with the hands into small pieces.

Rich Corn Muffins.—The following recipe makes a rich muffin for either breakfast or luncheon. As the fashion for eating cold bread and toast does not prevail as much as it did all hot breads are restored to favor.

To make these muffins use a cup of cornmeal, a cup of flour, half a cup of white sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, a cup of milk, two small teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a saltspoonful of salt.

Rub butter and sugar together, add the beaten eggs, the milk and at last the cornmeal and flour, with which have been sifted the salt and baking powder.

This quality will make about a dozen muffins. The method can be changed by using a cup of cream in place of the milk and omitting the butter and using only one egg.

Corn Butter Bread.—Sift the cornmeal, and to a teacupful of it put in twice the quantity of sweet milk. One pint is a good measurement.

Beat in two eggs, although you can get along with one; add half a teaspoonful of salt, and to this add the milk and meal gradually uptil everything is well blended.

A baking dish should be ready for the batter and placed in a hot oven. It should be ready to serve in half an hour.

ENGLISHWOMAN'S BEAUTY.

Some Ways In Which She Makes and Retains It.

The eyes of the Englishwoman look young. She knows how to make her eyes shine like stars by the use of a little pure borax dissolved in warm water. It takes out the dust and helps the sight.

She rests her eyes frequently. She never sits and gazes sideways upon an object.

The evergreen matron of London when she looks at you has a way of gazing right through you. Her brows are specially effective in this long, lovely gaze. They are dark, glossy and heavy, and they are perfectly molded.

This is because they are painted every night with a simple oily lotion which makes them grow, and they are brushed every morning with a little eyebrow brush, which encourages the roots of the hair to send forth little rootlets.

The teeth of the Englishwoman belong to herself alone. No other country has teeth to compare with them. They are sound and white. The Englishwoman eats cereals. Like the Irish and the Scottish woman, she thinks them necessary to at least one meal. And she chews them, too, for she knows that mastication is necessary to good digestion.

The Englishwoman, who is holding the world's record for keeping young, has certain things in her favor, and one is the habit of leisure. From birth she has been taught to take her time.

The Englishwoman's habits of thought help her out in the work of keeping young. She has the artless, dancing eyed expression of the young girl.

When not busy with social duties, the Englishwoman is pondering on bright thoughts. The nature of your thoughts makes a great difference in your face.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

For the roast of cold lamb course serve an egg salad sprinkled with minced mint leaves.

Happiness, though it may not seem so, is far more dependent upon patiently doing the best we can than upon any temporary triumph we may attain.

Alcohol or a toilet water applied to the wrists and temples is extremely invigorating. A saturated solution of borax is also found beneficial for this purpose.

When all the other changes have been rung on the salad repertory make cream cheese into balls, roll them in powdered nut meats and serve them with mayonnaise on lettuce leaves.

To clean picture frame glasses take a small piece of wash leather, wet it with methylated spirits and rub on the glasses. This will clean them beautifully. Polish afterward with a soft duster.

When a pipe from a lavatory basin or bath becomes clogged with soap take a handful each of common salt and soda, mix and force down the pipe. Leave for half an hour or more, then pour down a kettle of boiling water and dash afterward with plenty of warm water.

Dishcloths must be washed after they have been used if they are to be kept sweet and nice. First wash them in hot soapsuds, then rinse in clean hot water and hang out to dry. One of the nicest of dishcloths is made of knitted soft cotton, which will wash again and again and look as good as new. Another good dishcloth is made of a square of coarse crash hemmed This is also very easily kept clean

Close to the Ground.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1908, by Frank H. Sweet.

"SEEMS now like it's goin' to be a good crop year, mellowin' weather an' just rain 'nough to keep the ground from bakin'. If it keeps on like this, we can surely pay for the land come next crop an' maybe have somethin' left for a mule."

"An' what's it all good for?" asked Looizy. The girl spoke indifferently and with the slow drawl peculiar to the Georgia cracker. "You work harder'n any man round here, harder'n the plantation niggers themselves. An' what does it 'mount to? They have spendin' money an' go to circuses an' have store truck to eat, while we all just stick to corn pones an' grits an' work."

"But it's to pay for the land, Looizy," said the old man eagerly. "After that's done paid for we can have more spendin' money. There'll be no more rents nor shares. An' we're the only poor family round here that is aimin' to own land just like quality folks. I'm workin' for you all more'n for myself, Looizy, for you an' Betty an' Molly. I'd like to have you equal to the best of 'em. But it would be more pleasant-like to have store things. We might spend some o' the land money that a-way."

The girl made a quick, impatient movement.

"'Tain't the store things I care for," she said sharply. "I ain't after such truck. But I 'low I hate everything around here, it's so triflin' an' no 'count. We all are poor, ignorant crackers, an' we can't help ourselves. Gettin' land ain't goin' to make we uns quality. We must have learnin' an' manners an' know about things. But we all can't learn, for there's no schools roun' here an' nobody to show us." She paused and dug her bare feet in the sand. After a few moments she went on more slowly and with a side glance at her father: "You an' Betty an' the neighbors 'low as I'm lazy an' triflin' 'cause I don't help in the fiel' an' roun' the house. But I don't care. I don't care for the land. I don't care for work, an' I 'low I don't care for anything nor anybody."

"You're out o' sorts, Looizy, an' need more 'stractions. S'pose you go down to the settlement 'long o' Betty an' me an' help carry eggs. Mebbe it'll make you feel more peart."

But she shook her head decidedly.

"I hate the settlement. The boys call me wildcat an' cracker comet an' fling things after me. But I 'low

SHE MOVED WEARILY TOWARD THE CABIN.

I gener'ly fixes 'em." And she gave a harsh little laugh in which was a trace of exultation. "You all can tote the eggs. I reckon I'll go fishin' down the creek."

It was late in the afternoon when Looizy returned from the creek. As she approached the cabin she saw a strange team move away, and one of the two men who occupied the wagon she recognized as the settlement doctor. Hurrying forward, she almost stumbled over Betty, who was lying on the floor sobbing bitterly. But Looizy scarcely noticed her. She was looking at the motionless figure on the bed.

"What is it?" she asked in a sharp whisper.

"Pap's done smasht awful!" wailed Betty. "What shall we do? What shall we do?"

The figure on the bed turned slightly and tried to raise itself, but sank back, with a groan. In an instant she was by his side.

"What is it, daddy?" she asked softly as she smoothed the gray hair back from his face. "Can I help to raise you or—or anything?"

"You mustn't be scared, honey," he gasped. "It ain't nothin' 'cept for the pain an' for losin' the crop."

"But what is the matter, daddy? How's you hurt?"

"It's just one foot," he said, with a grimace, "only one, but the doctor 'lows it's plumb bad an' that I'm to truckle right here on this bed for the Lord knows how long."

"Pap was a-grabbin for—for a picka minny that was crawlin' in the road," said Betty between her sobs, "an'—an' the runaway horses stompt him. Niggers shouldn't be 'lowed to have young uns in the road."

"Was the pickaninny saved?" asked Looizy eagerly.

Her father nodded.

"The child wa'n't to blame," he said, "an' I couldn't help a-grabbin'. An' surely the young un's worth more'n it's cost me. I ain't a-mutterin' agin the hurt, but I do most p'intedly hate to lose the crop an' not have money for the land. If only I could have the hurt an' be able to work just the same."

"Never mind, daddy; it'll come roun' all right," she said quietly. "Just you rest easy an' don't worry. We all can look after things."

"An'—an' you don't feel hard on me for gettin' hurt? I was studyin' how to make things more pleasant-like, an' here I've done made 'em worse. It'll be more work, Looizy, honey, but I reckon you'll have to help Betty now an' ag'in. There'll be the hens an' pigs to look after an' the housework an' the tendin'. We'll have to be clost, but I reckon the hens 'll 'bout give us a livin'."

"I done told you not to fret, daddy," she said softly. "Just you rest easy an' 'pend on we all to look out for things. As for your hurt," a slight flush creeping into her face, "I'm glad of it. That's worth all the land an' the crops in the world."

As the night came on his foot grew more painful, and at times he was delirious. Looizy remained with him until after midnight, when, as he grew more quiet, she called Betty to take her place. Soon after the old man sank into a quiet sleep.

It was late in the forenoon when he awoke. Betty was working about the room, and he could hear the voice of little Molly outside calling the chickens.

"Where's Looizy?" he asked.

"I don't know. She done took some pone an' bacon an' left 'fore sunup. She 'lowed maybe she'd be back 'fore night an' mebbe she wouldn't. I asked her to help me first, but she 'lowed Molly an' me could look after the chores an' housework."

The old man sighed. He had been hoping for better things from Looizy.

Meanwhile Looizy was toiling slowly back and forth across the tobacco field. The rows were long and the work hard and laborious, and the girl made little apparent progress. But gradually as the hours went by her position shifted from one side of the field to the other. All through the long, hot day she worked, not pausing to eat or rest and only stopping when the shadows made it hard to distinguish the ground between the rows. Then she looked back at her work.

"Six rows done hoed," she said aloud. "It's a good day's work. But I'm plumb tired."

Throwing the hoe across her shoulder, as she had seen her father do, she moved wearily toward the cabin. On entering she found Betty in the act of setting the supper of grits and molasses upon the table. Her father looked up quickly as she came in.

"You've been a long time," he said. "We've been lookin' for you right smart."

"I was busy," she answered, "an' couldn't spare time for dinner. After this I'll try to be roun' come noon. But how've you been all day, daddy?"

"Toler'ble peart." Then as she sat down beside him he reached out and took one of her hands in his and looked up into her face. Her eyes were clear, and she met his gaze with a little smile. What did it mean? Had he been judging her too harshly? He drew her hand closer and noticed that it trembled as though with pain. He raised it to the light.

"Why, Looizy," and there were wonder and dismay in the voice, "your hands are all solid blister!"

"It's only 'cause they ain't used to the work," she answered hastily. "I've been that lazy my hands are act'ally gettin' soft. A few days in the field an' they'll be good hands for work."

"An'—an' you've been workin' in the field all day," he said slowly, "an' I a-lyin' here an' misjudgin' you! But you mustn't do it, Looizy, honey. It's too hard. If you 'low on helpin' you might look after the truck patch."

But Looizy shook her head.

"I'm the oldest," she said, "an' must look out for the man's work. If Betty an' Molly have time from the housework they might help in the truck patch."

As the weeks went by Looizy's hands became accustomed to the work and the blisters disappeared. When she had finished hoeing the tobacco she went to the cotton field. From there she went to the melons.

One day Looizy came in with a glowing face.

"The melons are ripenin'," she said, "an' there's goin' to be more'n we all ever had before."

A few days later Looizy reported that thieves had entered the field the night before and taken some of the melons. That night the theft was repeated. Several days passed, and more of the melons were missed.

"I wouldn't care if they wa'n't so pertic'lar," said Looizy, "but they just pick the biggest an' best."

Late that night she was awakened by a small figure at her bedside.

"What is it, Molly?" she asked drowsily.

"I've done cotched 'em," was the startling answer. "After you all was 'sleep I just crept out the cabin an' hid 'mong the melon vines. It seemed most a year 'fore they came, an' I was plumb sleepy. But I just pinched myself, an' when they did come I up an' told 'em 'bout we all workin' an' 'bout the land an' pap bein' sick an' 'bout you 'lowin' they might take the small melons an' leave the big ones."

"Molly'" And Looizy sat upright in bed. She was wide awake now. "Ain't you yarnin'?"

"I reckon not," confidently, "'cause I've got $2 one of the young men gave me for the melons. They's nice men an' 'lowed they'd be roun' an' see you tomorrow. They's camplin' over to Long pond."

The next morning as Looizy was on her way to work she was met by several young men.

"Miss Louise, I suppose?" said one of them, raising his hat.

"Looizy they call me," was the quiet answer.

"Well, I—I suppose that queer sister of yours has told about our raiding the melon patch?" hesitating and coloring a little as he spoke. "But I assure you we meant no real harm. If we had known the facts in the case we would never have entered the field. Somehow melons and apples have always seemed different from other property. However," a quick, frank smile coming to his face, "that isn't what we're here for. We wish to apologize and to make some arrangement for the future. You see, we are very fond of melons, and we have decided not to pick any more after dark. We might go to the settlement for them, but that would be a long walk, and the melons would not be fresh. Besides, we have acquired a taste for yours. Now, if you are willing to trust us we will act fair and square and pay you for every one we take. We shall want a lot, and there is another crowd of young fellows coming down from Augusta next week."

"MISS LOUISE, I SUPPOSE?" SAID ONE OF THEM.

"Augusta?" looking up quickly. "I 'low that's where they have schools—for girls, I mean?"

"There are several good ones, I believe," he answered. "Do you think of going?"

"N-no. I just asked. I reckon you can take what melons you want. We all are glad to sell 'em."

Before the melons were gone Andy's foot had so improved that he was able to hobble out to the fields. Leaning on his cane and assisted by Looizy, he went slowly from one field to another.

"It's a good crop," he said, "as good's I ever raised myself—corn mostly eared, tobacco good an' sca'cely any bumblebee cotton in the whole field. I can hardly b'lieve that one gal did it all."

One afternoon a few months later Andy called the girls into the cabin. Going to his strong box in the corner, he took from it a bag that was heavy with silver and small coins. These he emptied upon the table and divided into two piles.

"It's the most crop money we all ever had at oncet," he said, "if it was made by a gal. Now, this," pointing to the larger pile, "is for the land. It will pay it all up clear. An' this," touching the other pile, "is for Looizy to go to school up in Augusta. I had a talk 'long o' the boys that bought the melons, an' they told me 'bout Looizy askin' after the school. An'—an', Looizy," looking at her wistfully, "one of 'em—the one that talks—said as how he'd asked you to marry him an' that you answered no, you wa'n't fit, but that if ever you had a chance to git learnin', so you could act like quality folks, an' he should wait, then he could come an' ask ag'in. He said he felt it a duty to tell me an' that he should wait if 'twas a whole lifetime, for you was the noblest gal ever was an' the only one he could ever care for. He seemed a nice boy."

A soft color had been stealing into Looizy's cheeks, but her gaze did not fall.

"Yes, he's a nice boy, daddy," she answered, "but I told him not to wait, for it would be years an' years even if I ever got a chance. He said he wouldn't take that answer, though, an' kept beggin', so at last I said if he cid wait he could come an' ask ag'in some time. He's a foolish boy, but he—he is nice."

"An' you're nice, Looizy," said old Andy simply. "Well, after the talk I went down an' saw the storekeeper to the settlement, an' he gave me p'ints. This money 'll pay for schoolin' till next crop, an' by that time there'll be more. Looizy can board 'long o' her Aunt Lizy, who lives in Augusta. If I'd found out 'twas schoolin' you wanted so bad I might 'a' helped you before, Looizy, honey."

The girl had listened with a growing wonder in her face. Several times she essayed to speak, then rushed from the cabin.

"Poor little gal!" said the old man. "I didn't know as she cared so much."

TRY THE WATER

Splendid Home Remedy for Stomach and Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism.

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," exclaimed a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

"Stop loading your system with medicines and curealls, but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain, common, vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

To cure rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomache trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

How to Get Cinders Out of Eyes.

When travelers will open car windows instead of leaving them down, as all the wise ones do, there is the constant danger of cinders, which irritate the eyeball. Those who travel two or three times a day on the trains find that their eyes are in a bad condition about this time of the year. Here is a good bit of advice from one who knows: Restrain the impulse to rub the eye and insert a flat linseed in the corner of the eye. Close the lids and the seed will slide painlessly around the eyeball and soon come out at the other corner, bringing the cinder with it. The best part of this remedy is that it does not leave any chance of inflammation. The oil of the seed covers the eyeball and takes out all irritation. It is advisable for those who use the trains constantly to carry a few of these seeds in the pocketbook.

How to Cure Fainting Spells.

There is no more sure cure for an attack of faintness than a hearty sneeze. It immediately stimulates the blood vessels of the brain. In many persons fainting never goes so far as a loss of consciousness or loss of control of the limbs. And in these the sudden weakness is often brought to an end by a sneeze caused by nature herself without any external aid. A grain or two of pepper, snuff or tobacco introduced into the nose or tickling its interior lightly will usually insure a sneeze. These simple procedures or others similar in character may prove invaluable when smelling salts and other elegant aids are absent.

How to Preserve Pretty Feet.

A perfect foot is a great rarity, and so is a pretty foot. While it is not possible for one to obtain a perfect foot, one can cultivate a pretty foot. One should be just as dainty in the care of the foot as of the hand. The toes should not be cramped and squeezed until they are crooked in shape and overlap one another. The foot should be as white as any other part of the body, but the heel and the tips of the toes should be rosy and pink. Callouses and hard spots should be rubbed away with a piece of toilet pumice. It requires but little care to keep the feet soft, white and dainty.

Many a graceful woman with a good carriage prefers to ride in her automobile.

HAD QUIT WORK

Ready To Give Up In Despair Restored To Health By Vinol.

"I was sick, run-down, and finally had to give up work. After trying a number of remedies and several physicians, I was just about ready to give up in despair. I saw Vinol advertised, and decided to try it, and and it has done more good for me than all other means combined. It has built me up and restored my strength until I now feel twenty years younger and am able to attend to my work again as usual." Job Jeavons, 1036 Lind street, Wheeling, W. Va.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains tonic iron and all of the strengthening blood-making and body-building elements of cod liver oil but no oil.

Vinol is unexcelled as a strength creator for old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, and after sickness and is the best known remedy for coughs, colds and bronchitis.

We return your money if Vinol fails to give satisfaction.

MORE DEAD ONES. AND FEW MOURNERS.

The electric plant formerly owned by Tawas City, Mich., is now in private hands. No information is obtainable from city officials.

The generating plant of the city electric light works of Fayetteville, N. C., installed in 1902 at a cost of $30,000, has been closed down, and a contract for current has been made with a private company.

The municipal electric light plant of Galena, Ill., was installed in 1898 at a cost of $18,000. It was sold last July for $13,000, but this price included a twenty-five year light, power and traction franchise. Under the new contract the city will get practically twice the amount of street lighting that was furnished by the municipal plant at only 15 per cent greater cost. The plant has not been a success. One account of it says:

"Its management was changed as often as new political cliques gained power, and at times there was no street illumination at all. The commercial service was inferior."

News of the action of the council spread rapidly, and a large crowd congregated in front of one of the hotels to express their delight at getting rid of the plant. A brass band was pressed into service, and speeches were made by prominent citizens.

On Aug. 1 S. G. Blatchford took possession of the municipal electric plant installed by the village of Kansas, Ill., in 1900. The mayor writes that the plant was sold "to clean up our indebtedness." The plant had been in the market for a year before it found a purchaser, the sale having been ordered by a vote of the citizens. A disinterested citizen wrote as follows last February:

"The principal cause for dissatisfaction with public ownership was inefficiency or, you may say, economy.

"The affairs of the plant were attended to until recently by three—now one—members of the board of trustees, who received no extra pay for their services and therefore were not as attentive to the business as if it had been their own or they had been properly paid.

"The man in charge of the mechanical part of the plant is an engineer, but not an electrician, more than one might be who works entirely by rule of thumb.

"The bad service deters people who would otherwise patronize the plant from using the light. There is no service after midnight. Although it is generally believed that all night service and cheaper rates would result in a substantial increase of business, the men in charge hesitate to take the responsibility of making the change, which might be a losing venture.

"Electricity has almost been displaced in the business buildings by gasoline, owing to the cheapness and being generally more satisfactory than the electrics under city management."

Socialist Testimony.

Hon. Carl D. Thompson, a Socialist member of the Wisconsin legislature, points as the foreword to his pamphlet "The Constructive Programme of Socialism" this quotation from Liebknecht:

"We are not going to attain socialism at one bound. The transition is going on all the time, and the important thing for us in this explanation is not to paint a picture of the future, which in any case would be useless labor, but to forecast a practical programme for the immediate period, to formulate and justify measures that shall serve as aids to the new Socialist birth."

Mr. Thompson then proceeds to outline the "measures that shall serve as aids to the new Socialist birth," devoting more than one-third of his brochure to municipal ownership, which he frankly calls municipal socialism and evidently regards as the most available means for accustoming the public to socialistic principles and methods. We owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Thompson for helping to make clear the intimate connection between municipal ownership and socialism.

Mint, Anise and Cummin.

The growth of a small Wisconsin city made it very desirable to erect a high school building, but the citizens voted down the necessary bonds because it was felt that the indebtedness recently incurred for constructing a municipal light and water plant was as much as the people wanted to pay interest on at present. This is typical of what is going on all over the country. Cities are pawning their credit to invest in utilities which can be operated better and more economically by private enterprise instead of reserving it for true municipal purposes—schools, playgrounds, parks, paving, sewerage, etc. The result is that city development is checked, health is jeopardized and education is hampered because cities find it more interesting to invade the field of speculative business than to provide properly for the more commonplace but important functions of city government.

The City Pays the Bills.

The city of Kingston, Ont., has just discovered that it has been supplying current to its largest power customer at 17 per cent less than the actual cost of generating it. The city officials would not have made such a contract if they had been operating a plant in which their own money was invested.

Under the profit sharing plan adopted in 1907 by the New Haven (Conn.) Gas Light company between the corporation and its employees the men now own a total of 271 shares of the stock of the company.—American Gas Light Journal.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOW 100 YEARS OLD

CENTENNIAL TO BE CELEBRATED WITH APPROPRIATE CEREMONY.

Former Well Known Pastors of Old Church To Be Present the Coming Week.

The First Presbyterian church of Newark is one hundred years old this month. It was the first church organized in Licking county and the coming celebration marks not only a century existence as an individual church but a century of Christian work in Licking county. Thus it is not only a celebration in which the members of that church will take special delight but an event of general interest to all the churches of the city and county. On this account, it has been planned to begin the celebration with a general meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30 for all the churches of the city. Prominent ministers and laymen representing different churches will speak.

The feature of the Friday evening meeting will be an address by the Rev. John W. Montgomery of Piqua, O., a former pastor of the church. All who remember Rev. Mr. Montgomery will want to attend this meeting.

Saturday evening, the ladies of the church will serve the usual Saturday evening supper, which has become so popular with the people of the city. In connection with this purpose, all who come will be invited to remain for a general social hour. An orchestra has been secured to discourse sweet music while supper is served and fellowship together is enjoyed.

Sunday morning at 10 a. m. Dr. Powell of Toledo, also a former pastor, will preach the anniversary sermon.

Sunday school will follow this service with a special program for the occasion.

At 3 p. m. a Union Communion service will be held of the Presbyterian churches of the city. Rev. T. A. Cosgrove of the Second Presbyterian church and Rev. G. W. Applegate of the Woodside Presbyterian church will participate in this service.

At 6 p. m., a special Young People's service will be held.

At 7 p. m., Rev. Lester S. Boyce of Findlay, O., so well known to the citizens of Newark, will speak.

Thus a fitting recognition of the close of a century of Christian work in Licking county will be observed and it is hoped that the people of the city and county will attend these services.
